RECLAIMING CONTROL OF THE U. S. A.

Chapter One
The Battle Cry

If I were going to give this battle a chance we must do something different. What about starting out with a new battle cry? Nothing changes without a fight. And this fight will be won slowly over time buy educating people how WE THE PEOPLE have lost our freedom. We lost it because we've been lied to, and utterly manipulated, and ultimately duped.

Once you lean what has happen to WE THEE PEOPLE, I won't whisper it, so you'll be sure to hear it over all the political noise from fake news. Here's two BATTLE CRIES for size:

- "Decentralize Without Compromise"
- "So Big It Failed… and Did"

Not bad. But let's be honest, slogans are easy. Fixing a country? That's a lot harder.

Now, before you decide this is just another old man blowing off steam… you're right. I am blowing off steam. But I've had 88 years to build it up, so you might want to hear me out. As I see it right now, here's what we're looking at.

PROBLEM #1

If you don't know where you came from, you won't know where you're going.

That's not opinion, that's reality. A nation without memory is like a man without a compass. You may move, but you won't arrive. All Americans should be carrying their FREEDOM compasses!

PROBLEM #2

If we can't agree on what "freedom" and "liberty" mean… who exactly are we voting for?

We elect people to represent us, but we don't even agree on what they're supposed to represent. That's like hiring a pilot when nobody agrees on the destination. Good luck with that landing. Find out what and how your candidate defines FREEDOM!

PROBLEM #3

Those in power rarely give it back voluntarily.

History proves this, over and over again. Power, once centralized, tends to stay centralized. Not because people are evil, but because power is comfortable. And comfortable people don't usually stand up and say, "Hey, let's give this all back, because: "PROBLEM #3. Those in power never give it back voluntarily.

People enjoy power for the heightened sense of control, and freedom it provides, allowing them to act without constraint. It's like an addictive, dopamine-releasing "drug" that fulfills needs for security

History proves this, over and over again. Power, once centralized, tends to stay centralized. Not because people are evil, but because power is comfortable, profitable, and influence others. And comfortable people don't usually stand up and say, "Hey, let's give this all back." So the real question becomes:

How does a nation correct itself… without tearing itself apart?

Because history also shows what happens when that balance is lost. The American Civil War was one of the most painful chapters in our history, a reminder that when division reaches a breaking point, the cost is measured in lives, not just opinions. And no reasonable American wants to go there again. So if force isn't the answer, what is? It starts with something less dramatic, but far more powerful:

- Awareness
- Agreement on basic principles
- And accountability at every level of government

Change doesn't always come from breaking a system. Sometimes it comes from rebalancing it. Not all at once. Not through chaos. But through steady pressure from the very people the system is supposed to serve. WE THE PEOPLE.

Because in the end, FREEDOM in this country doesn't come from Washington. It's supposed to come from God. And if that's still true, and I believe it is, then change doesn't require a civil war. It requires a civil and spiritual awakening. Because in the end, freedom in this country will never come from Washington, the Congress, the Senate, or the President. It's supposed to come from our creator, given to:WE THE PEOPLE! And if that's still true, and I believe it is, then change doesn't require a civil war. It requires a civil and spiritual awakening.

SO HERE'S THE REAL QUESTION:

Can we take back control, without rewriting the Constitution or tearing up the Bill of Rights? I believe we can. But it requires thinking differently.

A DIFFERENT APPROACH

Right now, most major decisions flow through Washington, D.C. One place. One concentration of power. One giant bottleneck. What if we flipped that? What if decision-making flowed from the ground up instead of the top down? City councils represent their communities. Mayors gather consensus locally. And each city contributes a unified voice upward. Instead of power being concentrated, it becomes distributed. Closer to the people. Closer to real life. Closer to reality. And closer to accountability.

AND YES… THIS RAISES ANOTHER BIG QUESTION

What about political parties? Fair question. Because right now, many Americans feel like this: You don't vote for someone… you vote against someone. That's not representation. That's damage control. Many feel the two party system is dead. That's evident in the many times these two parties had shut down our government. You can never get things done when hatful fighting is going on.

A HARD TRUTH

Here's a thought. Somewhere along the way, our government started acting less like a governing body, and more like a charity that never has to ask for donations. Why? Because instead of relying on voluntary support, it started operating on taxation.

The first federal income tax was created in 1861 to fund the Civil War. The modern, permanent income tax system was established in 1913 following the ratification of the 16th Amendment. That amendment gave Congress right to impose a Federal income tax. Now, taxes are part of government, that's a fact. But the real question is this:

Is the system still disciplined, or has it become comfortable spending other people's money?

Something else happened during 1913, that was a new way of taxation by the Banking Industry, that we will be address, that is the reason for me writing this book. We Will be going into this in-depth.

ABOUT SPENDING

The federal government does, in fact, have a budget process. But in practice, that process is often:

- delayed
- expanded
- and supplemented with deficit spending

Which means money is regularly spent beyond what is collected in taxes. In business, if you operated that way long enough…
you wouldn't be in business.

WHERE THE FEDERAL RESERVE FITS IN

Understand the FederalReserve as we know it today didn't exist before 1913. The Federal Reserve was created on December 23, 1913, when President Woodrow Wilson signed the Federal Reserve Act into law. Established to provide a safer and more stable monetary system following the Panic of 1907, the Fed began operations in November 1914, creating 12 regional reserve banks.

Now let's be clear, regarding this matters. The Federal Reserve is not Congress. It doesn't pass spending bills. But it does influence the system. In reality, the facts prove the Federal Reserve isn't even Federal. That may come a s a shock for you, but if so Google it.

By influencing the system they can only:

- managing interest rates
- and expanding the money supply

Which can make it easier for the government to finance it's deficits. That's not ideal, financing debt. That's almost like using one credit cards to pay off another credit card. And when spending becomes easier, discipline becomes harder. Our county's really has no discipline left! Is Washington, D.C. governed with disciplined?

SO WHAT'S STOPPING THAT?

Our government, the government bureaucracy, and politicians have forgotten that We The People are supposed to be in charge. Why does it feel like we're not? Here's a fare question, and a HUGE PART OF THE PROBLEM: When large amounts of money are required to run for office, who really has influence over who gets elected? That's not a conspiracy, it's the reality of modern campaigns.

Running for national office today often requires:

- significant funding
- media exposure
- and organizational backing

And much of that comes from:

- large donors
- political action committees
- and institutional support

Now, that doesn't mean every elected official is controlled. But it does raise a fair question: When the cost of entry is that high, how close can representatives really stay to the people they serve? Over time, this creates distance. Not always intentional. Not always obvious. But real.

And when power, funding, and decision-making all begin to concentrate in the same place, the system naturally becomes harder for everyday citizens to influence. Try, getting ahold of anyone Washington D.C.

There are a few things or laws that could change all that, One of the would be, Politician, can not buy up the time set aside for non-profit advertises like the Salvation Army and the Red Cross. Make it so they can only do advertising on PBS, C-SPAN.

I can hear them all screaming now from the hallowed halls of the capitol building. Think of the money it will save who? The who, are those controlling the politicians in Washington. That a small thing but would help to get the ball rolling win the right direction. So let's get back to changing the system and fixing the USA, and decentralizing our nation!

SO WHAT DOES DECENTRALIZATION ACTUALLY LOOK LIKE?

Not chaos. Not tearing everything down. Not rewriting the Constitution. But rebalancing where decisions are made. Instead of pushing everything upward to Washington, we begin pulling responsibility back down to where people actually live. Here's what that could look like in practice:

LOCAL FIRST DECISION-MAKING

City councils and local governments take a more active role in shaping policy that directly affects their communities. Not as a suggestion, but as a foundation. Because local leaders:

- live among the people
- see the results of decisions firsthand
- and can respond faster than distant institutions

CONSENSUS FROM THE GROUND UP

Mayors and local representatives gather input from their communities, not just during elections, but continuously. That input forms a unified local voice. Instead of fragmented opinions, you get structured, community-based positions.

This approach will work as well, using County supervisors. There are fewer counties and counties generally have a more of a national political influence. That will defiantly make a difference.

REPRESENTATION THAT FLOWS UPWARD

Those unified local positions don't stop at city hall. They move upward:

- to the state level
- and then to the federal level

Not as individual political agendas, but as aggregated voices of real communities.

POWER THAT IS DISTRIBUTED — NOT HOARDED

Instead of one central point making most of the decisions. Power is spread out. Balanced and shared. Which makes it:

- harder to control
- easier to question
- and far more accountable

WHAT THIS CHANGES

When decisions are made closer to the people:

- Influence from large, distant funding sources becomes less dominant.
- Accountability becomes visible and immediate.
- And citizens regain a direct connection to how they are governed

THE BIG IDEA

This isn't about removing government. It's about realigning it. Not top-down control, but bottom-up responsibility. Because when power returns closer to the people, it becomes a lot harder for anyone, money, institutions, or politicians, to stand between WE THE PEOPLE and the government that's supposed to represent them.

Chapter 2

A DIFFERENT APPROACH

Right now, most major decisions flow through Washington, D.C. one place. One concentration of power. One giant bottleneck. What if we flipped that? What if decision-making flowed from the ground up instead of the top down? Instead of power being concentrated, it becomes distributed. Closer to the people. Closer to real life. Closer to reality. And closer to accountability.

SO HERE'S THE REAL QUESTION:

Can we take back control, without rewriting the Constitution or tearing up the Bill of Rights? YES, I believe we can. But it requires thinking differently. What if decision-making flowed from the ground up instead of the top down?

- City councils or County Supervisors represent their communities
- Both gather consensus locally
- Each contributes a unified voice upward

So the answer to that question about rewriting the constitution or doing away with the Bill of rights is NO! Those two documents have served this nation well, for one two-hundred and fifty years. However, there are changes that need to be made to how we go about our business, that will eliminate some of the power form some and put it in the hands of others. tTat will not only change the systems structure, but even possible heal our systems deep wounds.

We are bleeding to death and were not even on our way to the hospital!

These proposed changes will help heal our nation. Instead of the power being concentrated, it becomes distributed. It will remain closer to WE THE PEOPLE. Closer to real life. Closer to reality. Somewhere along the way, WE THE PROPLE were shuffled aside.

AND YES, OF COURSE THIS RAISES ANOTHER BIG QUESTION?

What about political parties? Fair question. Because right now, many Americans feel like:

- You don't vote for someone
- You vote against someone

And the two party system in Washington certainly doesn't get along, there's so much hate in Washington you could cut it with a knife. That's not representation. That's damage control. It's almost to the point a divorce would be the appropriate thing to do, let's hope not.

Here's Some Straight Take

Here's a thought. Somewhere along the way, our government started acting less like a governing body, and more like a charity that never has to ask for donations. Why? Because instead of relying on voluntary support, it operates on taxation. Now, taxes are part of government, that's a fact.

Our government isn't even accountable to itself, if it were why are we trillions and trillions of dollars in debt? That didn't happen by accident! Thank about3 9 trillion dollars. There isn't enough money in existence to pay this debt off, doesn't yet exist. The total value of all physical tangible currency (banknotes and coins) circulating globally is estimated to be approximately $8 trillion USD. This figure fluctuates based on exchange rates, economic activity, and inflationary pressures, with a significant portion of this cash concentrated in the US, Europe, China, and Japan. LET THAT SINK IN: We owe $39 trillion.

That much hasn't even been printed. Again, let that sink in. We are spending money we don't have, we haven't worked for it yet, it hasn't even been printed, we don't even have this our budget. That sounds scary to me, what about you?

50 percent of Americans get money from the government, that should be very concerning, because the time is coming to pay the Devil his due. I don't say this with tong in cheek, there is more truth to that statement than our government and the Federal Reserve would ever want to admit. But the real question is this: is the system still disciplined, or has it become comfortable spending other people's money?

Coming up, there are several others I will call as witnesses that you also should listen to, who were in our political realm. As well there are two others in particular you shouldn't have listened to, and the proof is in the dudding as you will see. We will get to that in the coming chapters.

ABOUT SPENDING

The federal government does, in fact, have a budget process. But in practice, that process is often:

- delayed
- expanded
- and supplemented with deficit spending

Which means money is regularly spent beyond what is collected in taxes. In business, if you operated that way long enough, you wouldn't be in business.

WHERE THE FEDERAL RESERVE FITS IN

Now let's be clear, and this matters. The Federal Reserve is not actually FEDERAL. There is nothing federal about them other than that name. Their name, came from a bunch of bankers and a few politicians decided to use that name. That in itself, was deception of the greatest magnitude going forward. Why, because it led We The People to believe this imbedded lie within their name. The Federal Reserve doesn't pass spending bills. The only thing the FED contribute to the economic, they:

- managing interest rates.
- and expand the money supply.

Again, this makes it easier for the government to finance deficits. That's not opinion, that's how the system is structured. And why not if your a BANK, thats the only way you can make money, BY LOANING IT OUT! But what if you didn't really have any of your own money to loan out? The Fed does not lend taxpayer money; rather, it creates funds digitally by crediting its own account and buying assets, such as Treasury and mortgage-backed securities.

So, the FED creates money out of thin-air, and purchase assets? Wow, I'd like to be able to do that, what about you? Don't lose track of that thought, because we will be covering this in greater detail, going forward.

In a broader financial and legal sense, it is defined as the entire property of a person, association, corporation, or estate that is applicable or subject to the payment of debts. Yes, the payment of a Treasury bond at maturity is considered the settlement of a liability (or debt obligation) for the issuer. The U.S. Treasury recognizes the principal as a bond payable liability, which, upon reaching maturity, is paid out as a final obligation, including the face value and any final interest. In other words this bond has to be paid with interest.

Banks invest heavily in low-risk securities such as U.S. Treasury bonds, municipal bonds, and mortgage-backed securities to maintain liquidity. So we have a privet Baking Institution, disguising itself as a Federal Agency, ordering the printing of our U.S. dollars, loaning this money to our U. S. Government, and setting the rates while collecting the interest. What a deal for the Banks. SHAZAM: $39 trillion dollars in debt! Gosh, I don't remember voting on this do you?

A SIMPLE WAY TO LOOK AT IT

What we have in Washington today often looks like two heads of a household that can't agree on how to run the home. Meanwhile, The children… WE THE PEOPLE… are left watching the argument instead of being supported. And yes, that's an opinion.

WHAT ABOUT SHIFTING PRIORITIES?

Many Americans feel that government attention is often directed toward:

- large industries
- major institutions
- and special interests

Whether that's Big Pharma, defense spending, corporate bailouts, or others, people see resources flowing upward instead of outward. That perception matters, because perception drives trust. And trust is wearing thin. Principles drive reality, it's what you do, not what you say that matters in the end.

THE CORE PRINCIPLE

Let's not forget something simple:

WE THE PEOPLE are not separate from the government. We are supposed to be the source of it. We are not spectators, they (the government) expect you and me to pay this bill of $39 trillion… ARE THEY SERIOUS

HERE'S OUR CURRENT DIRECTION

Power is centralized, so it's becomes harder for everyday citizens to influence decisions. That's why the idea of decentralization matters. Not as a slogan, but as a structural shift:

- more local control
- more accountability
- decisions closer to the people affected by them

Would it solve everything? No! But, it would solve some things? It just might stop our government from growing so distant from the We The People, so it doesn't just keep growing bigger. It grows less accountable. This is when WE THE PEOPLE start feeling like outsiders in our own house.

This didn't just happen over night or all at once. Someone has to do something out of the ordinary for you not to trust them. No, our dis-trust has happened because of the mismanagement of our countries business. Our TRUST has eroded away little by little.

This happened, decision by decision. Dollar by dollar. Until now, people like me who vote, and pay my taxes, are feeling like we're on the outside looking in. And when that happens, we're no longer governing ourselves. We're being managed, but mostly manipulation, and prropaganga.

This country was built on one radical principle of: WE THE PEOPLE are in charge. Not corporations. Not unelected systems. Not lifelong power structures. Not even lifelong politicians. Especially lifetime politicians. The people are in-charge, but we've been duped into thinking we've lost our power. If power continues to move farther away from We The People, freedom is lost. Freedom hasn't disappear overnight. It fades, quietly, gradually, and conveniently away, with the politicians making decisions and the Federal Reserve applauding.

Until one day, we realize we must ask for permission for things we used to have a right to. So I'll ask you plainly: Do we still believe in self-government, or have we gotten comfortable being governed? Let's delve into the 1st problem I suggested in the Introduction, and allow history to answer it for us.

PROBLEM #1

If you don't know where you came from, you won't know where you're going.

This makes America's, the U.S.A's problem even bigger! Americans today, don't really know who the Founding Fathers were, or what shaped the way they thought. The early colonies were largely settled by people with strong Christian beliefs, especially in places like Plymouth. While other influences, including enlightenment ideas about individual rights and limited government, these people, also played a major role. Jewish communities didn't arrive in meaningful numbers until later in the 1650s, beginning in New Amsterdam.

Then came the break that defined us, a war against the most powerful empire in the world at the time, the American Revolutionary War, where ordinary people chose to separate from England's king and govern themselves. That wasn't a small decision, it was a radical one. And it was built on specific beliefs about freedom, authority, and rights.

If we don't understand where those ideas came from, and what it took to secure them, we risk losing our direction entirely. Like I've said, and will keep repeating: A nation without memory is like a man without a compass. You may move, but where might you arrive. Our moral, and spiritual compass for Freedom, came from God! Not just any God, the creator of all things! And that leads directly to the next problem.

PROBLEM #2

If we can't even agree on what "freedom" and "liberty" means today… how can we possibly choose people to represent us?

According to Noah Webster's 1828 American Dictionary, Freedom is defined as the state of being exempt from the power, control, or confinement of another, covering personal, civil, and political exemptions. Liberty is defined as freedom from restraint (physical or mental) and the ability to act without control. Does this define you or me?

We elect officials to act on our behalf, but we don't agree on what they're supposed to defend. To some, freedom means maximum individual choice. To others, it means security and protection. To some, it means less government. To others, it means more involvement.

None of those conversations are new, they've been debated since the beginning. But here's the difference: The Founders argued about liberty, while still agreeing that liberty mattered. Today, we argue about liberty, and often can't even agree on what it is. Again, that's like hiring a pilot, when nobody on board agrees on their destination. Good luck with that landing. Thank God, those people weren't in-charge of the Normandy landing on D-day in Europe!

The real question then is:

H*ow close should government be to the people?*

WHAT I'M PROPOSING… IN PLAIN TERMS IS:

- Shift ALL power away from Washington, D.C.
- Let city mayors + city councils represent their communities directly.
- This same formula could be exersized using county supervisors.
- Have them vote on national matters by consensus.
- Eliminate political parties
- Create a system where "We the People" govern more directly locally.

How Would This Connect to American Principles?

This idea echoes of early American thinking:

- Federalism: Power shared between national and local governments.
- Republican representation: People elect local leaders to speak for them.
- Distrust of centralized power: A major concern of the Founders

Even documents like the Articles of Confederation leaned heavily toward local/state control before the United States Constitution strengthened the federal system.

Here Are It's Potential Strengths!

1. Closer to the People

Local leaders (mayors/councils) are:

- More accessible
- More accountable
- More in tune with real community needs

2. Less Centralized Power

- Reduces concentration of authority in Washington
- Could limit influence of large federal bureaucracies

3. Reduced Party Control

- Eliminating parties could:
  - Reduce political division
  - Focus decisions on issues instead of party loyalty

4. More Direct Representation

- Citizens influence local leaders → local leaders influence national decisions
- Feels more like bottom-up governance

BOTTOM LINE:
There easier to replace! Each of us can make a whole lot more noise downtown or county wise than we ever could ever make in Washington D.C.

"If you want a friend in Washington, get a dog."

That statement is attributed to Harry S. Truman, past president, highlighting the disloyalty and treacherous nature of D.C. politics.

Here's another great quote by: Will Rodger's, who made his living off of making jokes about politicians. "Now these fellows in Washington wouldn't be so serious and particular if they only had to vote on what they thought was good for the majority of the people in the U.S. That would be a cinch. But what makes it hard for them is every time a bill comes up they have things to decide that have nothing to do with the merit of the bill. The principal thing is of course: What will this do for me personally back home?"

Here Are Some Major Challenges & Questions!

1. Scale Problem

The U. S. has:

- 19,000+ cities/towns, it has 3,144 physical counties,
- Thousands of mayors and councils, and county supervisor.

EVERY COUNTY BIG OR SMALL GETS ONE VOTE!

I know thats going to raise some eyebrows! However, this is total representation by the people, for the people, to the people, in its final hour. This will draw out a finer conclusion when debated on a local level. This needs to be thoroughly discussed, but not at congress, they could never agree under their present condition.

This needs to keeps Big government, Big business, and the lobbyist at bay! ONE VOTE ONE COUNTY! Of course, this will be argued, until everyone is blue in the face. This is one of the KEYS and WISDOM of this Decentralization ever being a success.

Wisdom, is the GOD GIVEN ABIITY to see the end of what you are starting. If you don't like my plan pray and get your own god, to give you you another plan. However, make sure you have a little history to back up you plan!

With coordinating national decisions (defense, trade, currency) across those many voices wouldn't this be complex?

This isn't a problem, this is an opportunity to have one voice, the voice of "We The People." We have a War Department, they have a budget. We have e trade commission they have a budget. Currency will still be handled by the treasury department. However the Federal Reserve as we know it… (HOPEFULLY) will be done away with. We The People will own our own bank, and will benefit form the interest made on loans.

2. National Unity & Speed

Some decisions require:

- Fast action (war, emergencies, financial crises)
- Unified direction

A highly decentralized system could:

These decisions will be made my our President, and his counsel of advisors by a vote. These decision (with today modern technology), could be done as well by a vote from the cities mayors.

- Eliminating slow response time
- There would be any conflicting regional conflict.

3. Constitutional Structure

The current system is built around:

- Congress (House + Senate)
- Executive branch (President)
- Federal courts

Replacing that with a mayor-based or County Supervisor system would require:

- Major structural changes—and the Bill of Rights must remain untouched

4. Risk of Local Inequality

Different cities and counties have:

- Different resources
- Different priorities

City & county resources will not come into play, they're voting on federal issues, not local issues.

This would not lead to:

- Uneven national policy
- Strong regions dominating weaker ones

5. Eliminating Political Parties would be an asset to We The People

National Parties cause division, they also:

- Organize voters
- Simplify choices
- Coordinate policy platforms

Without them:

- Voting will become Balanced

A Balanced Way to Think About It

This idea sits on a spectrum:

More Local Control	← →	More Central Control
Your proposal		Current system

The U.S. already blends both:

- Local/state control (schools, policing, zoning)
- Federal control (defense, currency, interstate law)

Where Ideas Like This Often Lead

Rather than fully replacing the system, similar ideas are sometimes explored as:

- Stronger local governance + reduced federal overreach
- Term limits / anti-party reforms
- Ranked-choice voting or nonpartisan elections
- Regional councils influencing federal policy

Bottom Line

This is a fact: The Federal Reserve got this nation into the position we're in where we owe trillions of dollars in debt. They are responsible for loaning money. The people didn't vote, on how much our government should or can borrow. This needs to change, We the People need to be in-charge, not Big government or Big banks, or the War Machine. Let those who did this owe this debt, we can build them a debtors prison.

This is the ultimate solution, to decentralize our government, where local opinions influence nations problems, and compromise is settled by millions of vote, not 3 or 400. This would do away with the Billions people spend to be elected, and that position they have in favors to give in return. THIS may cause a few difficulties, but not nearly as much freedom and liberty We The People gain.

Thinking on the right things ushers us into a new place of contentment. A change that begins in our own daily thoughts and overflows to our homes and families and those people we love is where any good thought should be introduced. Share what you've read thus far with them.

Chapter 3

Let's Get One Thing Straight

I'm right to believe that millions of Americans have been left out:

A. "We didn't vote for this debt."

B. "We don't control the system."

C. "Money and power have drifted away from the people."

That sentiment is real, and it's growing. But if we want a refutable (meaning strong, challenge-ready) argument, we need to separate:

- What is fact
- What's opinion
- What's a good strategy

The Federal Reserve —Will Tighten their Argument

I said:

"The Federal Reserve got us into this mess, we call debt." If that's not partly true—or incomplete, and critics will attack that. A stronger, harder-to-refute argument needs to establish facts arguing away the FED'S control over WE THE PEOPLE'S version: The Federal Reserve System is only allowed to:

- Manages monetary policy (interest rates, money supply)
- Facilitates government borrowing (by influencing bond markets)

BUT:

- Congress authorizes spending and debt
- Presidents sign budgets into law

How we strengthen our argument:

"The Federal Reserve enables a system where unlimited borrowing is possible, but elected officials choose to use that system without direct consent of We The People." That version is much harder to shoot down. Later on in this book when we take both the government and the FED to trial, in front of the Supreme Court certain facts will come to life, that should scare the paints off anyone sitting on the FED'S Board. As well I'm writing a fictions book that brings this issue of thee Federal Reserve on trial. This transpire before the court of public opinion,.Andrew Jackson asks questions that should have been asked over 100 years ago.

Our Core Thesis (Refined & Powerful)

Let's sharpen our message into something that hits: our core FREEDOM 1ST STATEMENT, TRUTH ON PURPOSE!

"When decisions about money, debt, and power are made by a small group far removed from We The People, freedom is reduced to permission… not a right." That ties directly into our Bill of Right, and the earlier line: "The moment your money exists only by permission, your freedom does too."

Our Proposal — Needs to be Framed as a Movement Idea

We're not just proposing a system—we're proposing a shift in power structure:

THE PRINCIPLE

Decentralize national decision-making so that local representation directly shapes national outcomes.

THE MECHANISM (Our Vision)

- Local governments (mayors/councils and /or County Supervisors) represent the people
- National decisions are influenced by aggregated local votes
- Reduce reliance on:
    - Career politicians
    - Party structures
    - Centralized lobbying systems

What Makes Our Argument STRONG

1. It attacks concentration of power

- Washington
- Big banks
- Political elites

This resonates across both political sides

2. It speaks to fairness

"Why do a few hundred people decide for 330 million?"

That's emotionally powerful—and logically compelling.

3. It challenges money in politics

- Billions spent on elections
- Influence tied to funding

That's a widely recognized problem!

Where certain Critics WILL Attack U. S.

If we want this to stand up publicly, we must answer these questions:

"How do we manage national defense?"

"How do we respond quickly to crises?"

“How do we prevent chaos with thousands of local inputs?”

“What replaces Congress exactly?”

If we don’t answer these, our opponents will dismiss the idea as:
“Idealistic but unworkable”

Making it STRONGER (This is key)

Instead of saying:

“This is the ultimate solution”

We say:

“This is a direction we must move toward—and here’s how we start.”

That makes it:

- Credible
- Actionable
- Harder to reject

A MORE DEFENSIBLE VERSION OF OUR PLAN

Here’s how you make this realistic and powerful:

Step 1: National Digital Referendum Layer

- Majors or County supervisors issues (debt ceilings, war, currency changes)
- Require direct input from the people

Step 2: Local-to-National Voting Grid

- Cities/counties submit weighted votes
- These influence federal decisions

Step 3: Limit Federal Power Scope

- Push more authority back to states/localities

Step 4: Break Party Dominance

- Nonpartisan ballots
- Ranked-choice or open primaries

Our "Hammer Blow" Closing Statement

Here's the line that hits below the belt like Mike Tyson hitting them:

"A government that can spend without asking, borrow without permission, and controls our money without accountability is not being run by the people, it is being used to run over them."

Final Thought — Being Straight With You

We're tapping into something real:

- Loss of control
- Distrust in institutions
- Desire for accountability

But to win people—especially the younger generation, we need:

- Clarity
- Structure
- A path forward (not just a protest)

If We Want The Next Level

Why can't 'We The People' build something our obsolete government can't ignore.

Chapter 4

TAKING BACK OUR GOVERNMENT!

Our Freedom 1st Manifesto!

THE MOMENT WE LOST CONTROL

There was a Time when we lost control of our government. No-one will talk about who may have been bought off to do such a scoundrels thing, selling out your own country, and placing this debt burden on backs of our countrymen. The day is coming, when our America's government will be back in the hands of: We The People.

Our government has spent itself to oblivion, and a Federal Reserve is like a hungry piglet not knowing when it' had to much milk. They answer and accountable to know one but themselves. Today, our government is like a spoiled brat, if it doesn't get its way the members cream and shout, and once thats complete they join together and pout. Criticisms says it centers around irresponsibility, entitlement, and a refusal to abide by established rules.

They demand everything without compromise: Political factions are often described as demanding all their desires, such as in budget negotiations, or threatening to "shut down the government" if they do not get their way, akin to a child throwing a tantrum. One of the reasons is, American elites are not used to being told NO!They spent the industrial revolution in "splendid isolation" from the rest of the modernizing world.

When British businessmen came over, they were astonished at what American elites got away with here, knowing it would never be allowed in Europe

HOW DID THIS HAPPEN?

In general, I have found 1/3rd of the people will agree with whatever is being proposed, if its a common since point of view. One third of the people will not agree, with most conceptive views that demand change. One third of the people will argue, because they sit on the other side of the isle, and the believe arguing is their job. Ten percent are simply to dumb, to know the difference, and don't now enough to come inside during the rain.

Today, millions of Americans feel the decisions that shape our lives—our money, our debt, our future—are made far away, by people we don't know, influenced by forces we didn't elect, and really think they are above We The People .

We are told:

- The system is too complex
- The debt is unavoidable
- The decisions must be left to experts

But here is the truth: A government that can spend without asking, borrow without permission, and control our money without accountability is no longer being directed by We The People—it is dictating to them instead of directing them. This is not how a free nation was meant to operate. Freedom needs permission only from its people, not those they elect. And this is exactly what has happened in Washington D.C. Washington D.C. has the attitude "We Know Better Than You."

WHO IS REALLY IN CHARGE?

We can and should agree, the Presidents is, but Presidents come and go. However, is there a permanent establishment somewhere in-charge? This could be the rich and famous in Wall Street. This could also be the rich bankers who control the Federal Reserve. If by in-chance, we can change the power structure in this country from a Decentralize to a Centralized, how would this affect the rich and famous, and all their contact?

I believe the worms would come out of the woodwork. At present, all we can do is vote, but do we really decide? The Federal Reserve System influences the flow of money. Congress authorizes spending. Administrations come and go. Yet the result remains the same:

- We're Trillions of FIAT dollars in debt
- We have Endless spending
- There's no direct approval from We The People

Let's be clear:

The people of this nation never voted on the level of debt we now carry. And yet, we are the ones who must live with it, and eventually pay for it. We The People will be expected to pay this billie never voted on. What is not being told to We The People, is that the banking industry changes the rules behind closed doors (ALL MOST DAILY). Who is the Fed responsible to, CONGRESS? That's a joke! The farther power moves from the people, the weaker freedom becomes. That's the truth on Purpose!

THE ROOT OF THE PROBLEM IS DISTANCE!

The issue is not just policy. The issue is long distance. Distance between:

- The people and the decision-makers
- The consequences and the authority
- Responsibility and accountability

When power is concentrated:

- Influence follows money
- Decisions serve systems, not citizens

A SIMPLE PRINCIPLE

The solution is not complicated. Bring power closer to the people. Not through chaos. Not through revolution. But through structured decentralization. What we are seeking is resolution, not a revolution! A revolution is a sudden, radical, or complete change in a system, paradigm, or way of thinking. A resolution is a firm decision, promise, or plan to do something, often focusing on personal improvement or solving a specific problem. Revolution is about total transformation, while resolution is about determination.

WHERE POWER REALLY IS

There is no simple way forward using the current system. That may be hard to accept, but it is the simple truth. We are attempting to govern a nation of over 350 million people through a centralized structure where a few hundred individuals make decisions for everyone else. Over time, that system has become distant, slow, and increasingly disconnected from the lives of everyday Americans.

People feel it. They feel ignored. They feel unheard. They feel powerless. And when people feel powerless, they either withdraw, or they explode. But what if the answer is neither? What if the answer has been sitting right in front of us all along?

THE MISUNDERSTANDING OF POWER

Most Americans believe power lives in Washington, D.C. That's where the cameras are. That's where the speeches happen. That's where the headlines are made. So naturally, people assume: "If I want change…

that's where it has to happen." But that assumption is wrong. Washington D.C. is not where power begins. It's where power accumulates. Real power—lasting power—starts at the ground level. It starts in cities and counties. In communities. In rooms most people have never walked into. Those rooms are down in your city halls board room, and over at the county supervisor office, just waiting for you to attend.

THE ROOM MOST PEOPLE IGNORE

In nearly every city or county across America, something happens every week that most citizens never see. A city council or county supervisor meeting its taking place. It's not glamorous. It's not televised nationally. There are no cheering crowds. In fact, many times the room is half empty. But inside that room, decisions are being made that directly affect people's daily lives. Zoning. Policing. Spending. Local regulations. Community priorities. And here's what most people don't realize: There is a moment in that meeting when ordinary citizens are invited to speak. Not online. Not through a representative. Not filtered. But Directly.

THREE MINUTES OF REAL POWER

If you show up early, fill out a simple form, and wait your turn, you are typically given about three minutes to speak. Three minutes. That may not sound like much. But those three minutes are something incredibly rare in today's world: Unfiltered access to decision-makers.

You are standing in the same room. Looking them in the eye. Speaking directly into the record. No media spin. No social media algorithm. No one rewriting your words. Just you, and the truth you bring into that room. That is: 'TRUTH ON PURPOSE', YOUR GOD GIVEN RIGHT, and: LET THE FREEDOM BELL RING… because you showed up!

WHY THIS MATTERS MORE THAN PROTESTS

We've been conditioned to believe that change requires noise. Marches. Crowds. Protests in the streets. And sometimes those things have their place. But they are not the only path, and often not the most effective one. Because shouting from the outside does not carry the same weight as speaking from the inside. One organized voice inside a decision-making room can outweigh a hundred voices outside of it. Why? Because decisions are made *inside the room. Not outside of it.

HOW CHANGE REALLY HAPPENS

Most people imagine change as a massive event. A movement. A wave. A sudden shift. But in reality, change almost always starts small. One person shows up. Then another. Then a handful more. A concern is raised. A question is asked. A pattern is noticed. City or county officials begin to hear the same message, again and again. And something begins to shift. Not because of force, but because of presence, or a constant pressure. Because the people who make decisions can no longer ignore the people who are showing up. It's a long drive to Washington D.C. … and whose going to listen?

FROM LOCAL VOICES TO NATIONAL IMPACT

Here's where this becomes powerful. When multiple cities and counties begin hearing the same concerns. When local leaders begin aligning around the same issues. When communities start speaking with clarity and consistency. That influence doesn't stay local. It moves upward. Mayors talk to mayors. County supervisors talk to county supervisors, They communicate with state leaders. Patterns become policy discussions. What began as a voice in a room, becomes a force across a region. And eventually, a nation.

THE TRUTH MOST PEOPLE DON'T WANT TO HEAR

The system is not completely closed. At the local level, it's often underused. City council and supervisor rooms are not overflowing with citizens demanding change. They are often quiet. Not because people don't care, but because they don't show up. That's a hard truth. But it's also an opportunity. Because the less crowded the room, the more powerful your voice becomes when you walk into it and speak up.

A DIFFERENT KIND OF COURAGE

It takes courage to march in the streets. But it takes a different kind of courage to walk into a room, stand at a podium, and speak directly to those in authority. No crowd to hide in. No noise to blend into. Just you. Clear. Focused. Present. That kind of courage changes things.

THE SHIFT WE NEED

If we want to take back control of the U.S. A., not tear things down, but rebuild them correctly, we must rethink where we focus our energy. Not just upward, but outward. Into our cities. Into our communities. Into the county rooms where decisions begin. Because that is where influence is most accessible. And where it is most often ignored.

FINAL THOUGHT

You don't take back control in the streets. You take it back in the rooms where decisions are made. And those rooms, are closer than you think.

Here's how:

1. LOCAL REPRESENTATION MATTERS

- City councils and mayors and County supervisors represent real people, not political machines.
- They gather input directly from their communities.

2. NATIONAL DECISIONS FLOW FROM LOCAL VOICES

- Major national issues are influenced by aggregated local votes
- Not just politicians, but communities, are heard

3. THE PEOPLE REGAIN THEIR VOICE

- Decisions reflect millions—not hundreds
- Power flows upward, not downward

BREAKING THE CYCLE

Today's system runs on:

- Political parties
- Campaign money
- Promises tied to influence

Billions are spent to gain power, and that power is often repaid with favors. When elections cost billions, representation is no longer free, it is financed. This is one of our nations biggest problems, and nobody in congress or the senate wants to give an inch, and why not. If you severe in this government positions you are fixed for live. And let's not talk about the insider information the are privy to. That all can be done away with by using a decentralized system.

It would reduce the federal workforce and cutting bureaucratic layers, some projections suggest significant, though highly variable, savings. The Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE) has claimed potential savings of over $100 billion through waste reduction, contract renegotiations, and staff reductions.

Of course the critics have here spin, but if you don't have people working on your payroll, that is a saving, especially, when these are federal employees drawing comprehensive benefits, retirement, health insurance and so forth.

A decentralized system reduces:

- The cost of influence
- The power of centralized control
- The grip of party-driven division

WHAT ABOUT THE RISKS?

Yes—there will be challenges.

- Coordination may be harder
- Decisions may take longer
- Disagreements will exist

But let's ask the real question: Is efficiency more important than freedom?

Freedom has never been the easiest path. But it has always been the most valuable one.

WE THE PEOPLE, The Constitution begins with three powerful words:

"We the People. "Not: We the politicians, or

- We the institutions
- We the powerful
- We the Press

- We the BIG BUSINESS'
- With Elite

"We the People," the opening phrase of the U.S. Constitution, signifies that government power resides in citizens, not rulers.

The evolution of this concept has been a long, often contested process rather than a single sudden loss. The debate over "WE THE PEOPLE" is an ongoing, evolving struggle for sovereignty, with citizens holding the foundational, theoretical power while government institutions (federal, state, and judicial) often define and apply the phrase in practice. The phrase implies that citizens are the ultimate source of authority, though the government sometimes acts as the active, day-to-day interpreter

While the nation was founded on the idea of self-governance in 1776, "We the People" initially excluded women, enslaved people, Native Americans, and those without property. Over centuries, this definition expanded through constitutional amendments, but the perception of losing freedom often stems from a combination of political polarization, executive overreach, and restricted voting access.

When and How Freedoms Have Changed

- Early Restrictions (1800s): While property requirements for voting were lifted by the 1820s-30s, free African Americans and women who previously voted in some areas lost those rights, and Native Americans were excluded from citizenship until 1924.

- Democratic Erosion (Recent Decades): A 2021 Freedom House report noted a 10-year decline in U.S. democratic quality, citing mass arrests of journalists, violations of norms meant to prevent abuse of office, and misinformation.
- Election and Voting Rights (2010s–Present): Since 2010, many states have passed laws to restrict access to the ballot, intensify gerrymandering, and politicize election administration.
- Executive Overreach: Experts argue that power has shifted away from Congress to the executive branch, with presidents using executive orders and "signing statements" to create policy, accelerating in the 21st century.
- Digital and Cultural Pressures (2020s): Cancel culture, intimidation, and online suppression have been cited as contributing to a decline in freedom of speech and expression.
- Land and Property Rights: Stringent zoning regulations and land use restrictions have reduced the freedom to develop property and build starter homes, particularly since the 1920s

But still it's: We the People

Somewhere along the way, those words became symbolic instead of operational. It's time to make them real again.

FINAL DECLARATION —HERE'S THE HAMMER BLOW

The moment your money exists only by permission, your freedom does too. The moment your government acts without your voice, your power has already been taken. This is not about left or right. This is not about party or personality. This is about control. And the question is simple: Who should control the future of this nation?

If you answer is:

“We the People” Then the path is clear.

Chapter 5

CALL TO ACTION

This is not a protest. This is a proposal. This is not rebellion. This is restoration. It start locally:

- Ask questions
- Demand transparency
- Engage your community

We must teach the next generation:

- What freedom means
- What responsibility requires
- What self-governance looks like

Because in the end: A free nation is not maintained by its government, it is maintained by: We The People.

STAYING SILENT NEVER WORKS ANYWHERE!

Everything I've written comes back to one undeniable truth: "The moment your money exists only by permission… your freedom does too." Think about that. You work all week. You earn your pay. But instead of holding it in your hands, it exists as numbers on a screen, controlled, tracked, and approved by someone else. And that leads us to a simple principle: Remember this: If you don't hold it, you don't own it.

MY FINAL WORD

I'm not just writing a book. I'm putting my 88-year-old stake in the ground. I'm drawing a line in the sand and saying: Enough already.

You've gone far enough. So let me say it as plainly and as honestly as I can, I'm calling out those responsible for this economic disaster: and The Federal Reserve nightmarish debt of $39 trillion and counting!

HERE'S HOW IT HAPPEN IN A CONDENSED STORY

Today, because of that "secret meeting," we're living with the consequences, over $1 trillion a year in interest payments on the national debt alone. Let that sink in. Now think about this: If you built a business on collecting interest, and you had the power to create the money, and you could loan it to a government, what can legally tax its citizens to repay you, what a sweet deal. How could you lose? You wouldn't. And they haven't. But you'v left We The People holding the bag.

But somewhere out there, some honest soul, still in their right mind, with an ounce of FREEDOM in their jeans, might stand up and say: "Whoa, partner. That dog won't hunt. That's a mile too high, a century too far, and a block and 1/2 off center. Back it up, and think again." If this was a great idea why didn't you allow, We The People to vote, and why was this meeting done in secret? If you want a second opinion; this deal is outright ugly, it so ugly it should get a job haunting house.

THIS IS NOT WHAT MOST PEOPLE THINK

Most Americans believe this is the doing of their government. It's not. This is the result of a private banking system that has been allowed to control the lifeblood of our economy, money itself. Call it what it is: IT'S OUR FEDERAL CARTEL.

A system that profits from debt, expands through control, and quietly transfers wealth from the many, to the few. Plus, they control the interest rates, what a sweet heart deal. There making it on both ends, someone please show them how for make to make it in the middle. Who knows how much they make transferring our Gold around to various countries.

THE CONSEQUENCE

Every time money is created out of thin air, every time more fate bills are printed, every time interest rates are manipulated, the value of our work, is reduced. Our savings weaken, our purchasing power shrinks, our future becomes uncertain. This has selfishness and greed written all over it. If this is the FED's Idea of transparency, what does the FED'S books look like, can We The People have then audited? NOPE!

THE SOLUTION

If the problem is centralized control, then the answer is not more control. The answer is returning control to We The People. We must rethink the foundation of money itself. For centuries, one thing held its value:

Gold.

It cannot be printed. It cannot be manipulated into existence. It must be earned. And more importantly, it exists outside of permission, and it's indestructible. It has to be dug out of the ground, there are only certain place Gold can be found. And only so much of it to go around.

WE MUST FIND A DIFFERENT WAY FORWARD

Instead of concentrating wealth and control in distant institutions, return value to the hands of the people.

- Let money represent something real
- Let communities rebuild local financial strength, locally owned Banks.
- Let individuals store value that cannot be erased with a keystroke

Because freedom is not theoretical, Freedom must be held.

FINAL DECLARATION

This is not about politics. This is not about parties, Right, Left, or in the middle. This is about power. And who holds it. So I leave you with this, not as a question, but as a challenge: If your money can be controlled, restricted, or taken, ARE YOU ARE TRULY FREE? My final nail into the FED'S COFFEN, with a sludge hammer: "The moment your money exists only by permission, your freedom does too."“What would have to change to make this happen?" To make this vision happen, five things would have to change:

1) The people would have to wake up first.

No law changes until enough Americans understand the issue in plain English:

Money by permission = freedom by permission.

That means your first battle is not in Congress. It is in the mind of the public. So the first move is:

- simplify the message
- repeat it relentlessly
- make it unforgettable
- teach it through books, speeches, videos, shirts, short clips, and town halls.
- Make it uncomfortable without FREEDOM

Because if the people do not understand the trap their in, they will never demand a way out.

The political system only moves when public pressure becomes impossible to ignore. That is how reform starts in practice. This is an inference from how constitutional and monetary authority is structured and changed through legislation and elections.

2) Congress would have to change federal money law.

Under the Constitution, Congress has the power to coin money and regulate its value, while states are restricted from coining money or making anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts. That means a true national shift would require Congressional action. This fact is interesting! The States don't need the Federal government's approval to mint GOLD? That is great, but that won't solve We The Peoples problem.

So if you are asking, "What would actually have to happen?" the answer is: Congress would need to begin passing laws that do some combination of the following:

- audit and fully disclose the gold system and reserve structure.
- redefine how U.S. money is backed or redeemed.
- restrict unchecked monetary expansion.
- reform or repeal parts of the Federal Reserve framework.
- create a lawful pathway for gold- and silver-linked money to circulate alongside or instead of pure fiat currency.

Why? Because Federal Reserve notes exist under federal law, and the Federal Reserve Act governs their issuance. So the blunt truth is this:

You do not get from here to there without changing federal law!

3) States would have to build parallel pressure from below

A full national reset starts in Washington, but pressure can start in the states. Some states have already moved in pieces of this direction. Utah law recognizes specie legal tender in the state under certain conditions, and Texas created a state-administered bullion depository. That tells you something important:

The door is not fully closed.

So the practical state-level path looks like this:

- remove state taxes and penalties on gold and silver exchange
- authorize state bullion depositories.
- allow state vendors and citizens to contract in gold or silver where lawful.
- create state study commissions on sound money
- pass resolutions pressuring Congress for federal reform

That does not instantly replace the dollar. But it builds legal, political, and cultural momentum.

4) Local banking would have to be rebuilt carefully, not romantically.

There must be local business people opening banks in Cities where privet citizens have ownership and credibility is key. Most all banks are dependent on thee Federal Reserve. But when they are gone, honesty and credibility should return, not because we expect it, but because we demand it. This is directionally clear, but in practice those banks would still need charters and, if they want insured deposits, FDIC approval. State-chartered banks exist, but they operate within a new federal regulatory framework.

There is no reason a Banks should go broke, if disciplines, and safe loaning guidelines are in place and followed. Like any business, you have to run it with common since using best practices, under the guidelines of discipline.

So the real-world version is this: You do not simply say, “Open local banks tomorrow.” You build:

- state-chartered community banks
- precious-metals depositories

- contractual gold/silver savings products where lawful
- local lending institutions with transparent reserve and lending practices
- public demand for banks that serve depositors rather than financial engineering. In other words:

The local-banking piece is possible, but it must be built legally and institutionally.

5) The culture would have to stop worshipping convenience.

This may be the hardest part. A permission-based money system survives because it is:

- fast
- easy
- invisible
- familiar

Most people will not fight it until they understand the cost: surveillance, dependency, inflation risk, and loss of control. So to make this idea happen, people would have to accept a hard truth: Convenience is not the same thing as freedom. That is not a legal problem. That is a moral and cultural problem. So what is the actual step-by-step plan? Here is a clear version:

Phase 1 — Educate

This book and others, speeches, videos, websites, and messaging all drive one line at a time:

"The moment your money exists only by permission… your freedom does too."

Phase 2 — Organize

Build a movement around 3 demands:

- full transparency and audit of the monetary system
- legal protection for sound-money alternatives
- rollback of centralized monetary control

Phase 3 — State action

Target sound-money-friendly states first:

- bullion depositories
- tax reform on gold/silver exchange
- legal-tender reforms where allowed
- formal resolutions pressing Congress

Phase 4 — Federal legislation

Push for:

- Federal Reserve reform
- hard limits on money creation policy
- lawful gold-linked currency options
- public disclosure of reserve structure and gold holdings

Phase 5 — Rebuild local control

Encourage:

- community banks
- lawful asset-backed savings structures
- transparent local lending
- less dependence on distant centralized financial power

Bottom-line reality check

Here is the straight answer: What would have to change to make this happen? Not just one thing. It would require:

- a public awakening
- state-level pressure
- federal law changes
- banking reform
- cultural change

And here is the key sentence for your book: This will never happen because the powerful suddenly grow a conscience. It will only happen when enough Americans understand that control of money is control of freedom. That is the HOW. And here is your bridge line into the next section of the book:

SO WHAT'S STOPPING IT?

What's stopping it is simple: the people who benefit from the current system still control the language, the institutions, and the fear. But systems built by men can be changed by men. "What Would Have to Change to Make This Happen?"

MAKING IT "BULLETPROOF"?

Not with trust. Not with promises. With rules that cannot be easily reversed, or erased.

1) LOCK IT INTO THE CONSTITUTION (NOT JUST LAWS)

Laws can be changed quietly. The Constitution cannot. The foundation must be:

- No money created without a defined, measurable asset backing
- No private control over national currency issuance
- Full transparency of reserves, always auditable

Why? Because the Federal Reserve Act was just a law. And laws can be rewritten behind closed doors. This time, it must be untouchable without the consent of the people.

2) REMOVE THE POWER TO CREATE MONEY OUT OF NOTHING!

This is the heart of the problem.

The FED has no brakes, not even a parking brake, thats understandable, they never park. If any institution, bank or government that can:

- create money
- lend it at interest
- and expand supply at will, the system will ALWAYS drift back to control and exploitation.

So the rule must be absolute:

No money creation without real, verifiable value behind it.

Not "policy." Not "confidence." Something real.

Never lose sight, The Federal Reserve is not a government entity or institution. They've done a great job keeping this a secret, and even a better job deceiving WE THE PEOPLE!

3) FULL, PERMANENT TRANSPARENCY (NO MORE SECRETS)

No more “trust us.”, Every citizen should be able to know:

- how much money exists
- what backs it
- where reserves are held
- whether it has been altered

Not once a year. Not on request. At all times. Because secrecy is where corruption grows.

4) DECENTRALIZE CONTROL NEVER ONE POWER CENTER AGAIN.

The mistake before? Too much power in one place. So the fix is structural:

- No single institution controls the entire system
- Local and state-level financial structures must exist
- National policy cannot override everything instantly

Think of it like this: If one door fails… the whole house shouldn’t collapse.

5) FORCE SKIN IN THE GAME

Here’s where systems break: People in control risk nothing. So we change that. Anyone who creates or manages money must be accountable for failure. Meaning:

- no bailouts
- no “too big to fail”
- no shifting losses to the public

If you break it, You pay for it. That alone changes behavior overnight.

6) PERMANENT AUDIT POWER BELONGS TO THE PEOPLE

Not politicians. Not agencies. The PEOPLE. Independent, citizen-controlled audit authority must be:

- ongoing
- protected
- impossible to shut down

Because once oversight is removed, the system begins drifting again.

7) MULTIPLE FORMS OF LAWFUL MONEY (NO MONOPOLY EVER AGAIN)

Monopoly is the danger. If there is only ONE form of money, whoever controls it controls everything. So the system must allow:

- alternative lawful stores of value
- competing systems within legal bounds
- freedom to hold real assets outside centralized control

That way: No one can trap the entire population again.

8) MAKE IT POLITICALLY SUICIDAL TO REVERSE

Here's the reality: Nothing is truly permanent unless the PEOPLE defend it. So the final safeguard is this: The public must understand it so clearly that any attempt to reverse it becomes political suicide. That's where your message comes in. Because once millions understand: "The moment your money exists only by permission… your freedom does too." Then any politician who tries to take that freedom back, won't survive the next election.

THE REAL LESSON FROM HISTORY

What happened after Andrew Jackson? The system didn't disappear, It rebranded, reorganized, and returned. That tells us something critical: The danger is not one system. It's the concentration of power itself. We don't fix this by trusting better people. You fix it by building a system where: Bad people can't break it, or break in. Where greed has no lever to pull. Where power has no single switch to flip. Where control cannot quietly return in a different disguise.

"Freedom is not protected by good intentions, it is protected by systems that cannot be corrupted."

Chapter 6

WHEN POWER PROTECTS ITSELF

WE TAKE IT BACK ONE BRICK AT A TIME!

There is a reality in America that most people feel, but few are willing to say out loud: The more powerful you are, the less likely you are to be held accountable. That truth doesn't sit well. It shouldn't.

Because it cuts directly against everything this country was supposed to stand for. Equal justice under the law. Not selective justice. Not convenient justice. Not delayed justice. Equal justice. And yet, over time, something has shifted.

THE REALITY WE CAN NO LONGER IGNORE

Look around. When ordinary citizens break the law, consequences are often swift and severe. But when individuals tied to power, whether political, financial, or institutional are involved. Things slow down. Investigations drag out. Details become "complicated."

Decisions get postponed. And in many cases, nothing happens. Or if something does happen, it is so delayed or diluted that it barely resembles accountability. People notice this. And when they do, something dangerous begins to take root: A loss of trust. Not just in leaders… But in the system itself.

EXAMPLES PEOPLE SEE, WITHOUT NEEDING HEADLINES

You don't need to name names to understand the pattern. We've seen it across different sectors:

- Major financial institutions making reckless decisions that harm millions, yet individuals at the top walk away untouched.
- Political figures accused of serious wrongdoing, yet cases stall, disappear, or never fully materialize.
- High-level insiders benefiting from information or influence, while ordinary citizens are held to a stricter standard.
- The recent, aggressive surge of respiratory illness in China, dominant in late 2025, is identified as a new variant of the Influenza A(H3N2) virus that killed millions

Meanwhile: A small business owner can be crushed by regulation.
An average citizen can face immediate penalties for far less. That contrast is what people feel. And that feeling matters, because perception, over time, becomes reality.

WHY THIS SHOULD NEVER HAPPEN

A system that protects power instead of holding it accountable does not remain stable, it erodes slowly at first, then all at once. Because justice is not just about punishment, it is about trust. If people begin to believe that:

- Laws apply differently depending on status
- Accountability is optional for the connected
- And consequences are reserved for the powerless

Then the foundation cracks. And once trust in justice is gone, everything else begins to follow. Justice is the bench Freedom and Liberty sit on holding hands.

HOW DID WE GET HERE?

Remember, this never happen overnight. It happened through concentration, or indifference. Drip by drip, drop after drop. Power became centralized. Decisions moved further away from the people.

Institutions grew larger, more complex, and less accessible. And with that distance came insulation. Those at the top became harder to reach, harder to question, harder to challenge. Not because the system was designed to fail, but because it became too removed from We The People, the citizens it serves. Keep in mind, indifference is the fence people sit on not realizing it is on fire.

THE MISSING FORCE: CONSISTENT, STRUCTURED PRESSURE

Here is the uncomfortable truth: Accountability does not happen automatically. It happens when pressure makes inaction more dangerous than action. And right now, that kind of pressure is often missing where it matters most. Not because people don't care, but because they are focused in the wrong places. Shouting into the void. Arguing online. Protesting without direction. Energy is being spent, but not applied.

WHERE CHANGE ACTUALLY BEGINS

Real change does not start at the top. It starts at the point of access. And in America, one of the most overlooked points of access is this: Local government. City councils. County boards. Community meetings.

These are not symbolic spaces. They are operational spaces. Decisions are made there. Records are created and kept there. Voices are heard there. And most importantly, they are open to you!

HOW WE THE PEOPLE CHANGE THE OUTCOME

If we want to restore accountability at every level, we must start where we still have direct access. Here's how that begins:

1. SHOW UP WHERE YOUR VOICE IS ON RECORD

City council or supervisor meetings are not closed rooms. They are public. And in most cases, you are given time to speak. Three minutes may not seem like much, but it is three minutes of direct, documented, unfiltered communicated well. That matters, because once it is on record, it cannot be erased.

2. CREATE CONSISTENCY, NOT OUTRAGE

One voice can be ignored. Repeated voices cannot. When the same concerns are raised:

- Week after week
- City after city, and county after county
- Citizen after citizen

A pattern forms, and patterns demand attention.

3. TURN LOCAL VOICES INTO FORMAL ACTION

Local leaders are not powerless. They can:

- Pass resolutions
- Request investigations
- Communicate upward to state and federal levels

When citizens engage consistently, local officials are more likely to act. Because now they are accountable too.

4. SHIFT THE RISK

This is where the real change happens. Right now, pursuing powerful individuals can feel risky to those in authority. But when public pressure becomes:

- Visible
- Documented
- Sustained

The risk shifts. Now the greater danger is doing nothing. And that is when action becomes possible.

5. BUILD FROM THE GROUND UP

One city or county becomes two. Two become four, Four becomes Eight. Eight become a movement. Not driven by noise, but by presence. Meaning people showing up to have their voices heard.

Something I've learned, you never get in life what you deserve, you only get in life what you demand…. And that doesn't mean being loud!

However, you must be willing to pay the piper, and command by showing up, and conquering FEAR. You must learn to speak boldly, slowly, and with passion! This can only be done by your presence, we need people who refuse to sit on the sidelines.

Our website myfeedom1st.com will certainly help to accomplish this. We have the message, we have the t-shirts, as well the video material, and facts against both the government, and the Federal Reserve, to sustain a long argues backed with facts.

A DIFFERENT KIND OF POWER

We often think of power is something distant. Held by others. Controlled somewhere far away. But that is not entirely true. Power also exists in proximity. Power exists In the rooms you walk into. In meetings you attend. In moments where you can speak. Most people don't use that power.

Which is exactly why it remains so effective for those who do. Remember, what you have to say is important! Your speaking to We The People, telling them they have a bill to pay, they probably don't know anything about. They need to know with understanding The fed is hading us their $39 trillion bill. This may seem imaginary to most, but the FEDERAL RESERVE (FED) has every intention off collecting it, and they are in cahoots with the federal government.

OUR FINAL TRUTH

We may not control everything. But we are not powerless. Accountability does not begin with force. It begins with presence. With citizens who are willing to step forward, not just in frustration, but in action.

Because in the end: A system that protects power can only continue, if the people it serves remain silent. And the moment WE THE PEOPLE decide to show up, consistently, clearly, and on record, is the moment the balance begins to shift back.

This is the moment accountability exists not only by permission, but justice does too. And that is exactly what WE THE PEOPLE must take back JUSTICE.

Justice makes things right again. We must get back to a system of law in which every person receives his/her/its due from the system, including all rights, both natural and legal, given to us in our Bill of Eights & Constitution.

Chapter 7

MAKE IT IMPOSSIBLE TO STEAL!

Let's be honest, this has already happened once. A system was created that slowly pulled control of money away from the people, and placed it into the hands of a few. Then it was challenged. Then it was shut down. And yet… it came back. Different name. Different structure. Same result. Which tells us something we can no longer ignore:

If we don't fix the structure, history will repeat itself.

THE HARD TRUTH

You cannot fix this problem with better politicians. There is no such thing. You cannot fix it with promises. You cannot fix it with oversight committees that can be ignored, delayed, or dismantled. Because the truth is simple: Where power exists, it will be used. Where money can be created, it will be abused. So if we are serious, truly serious, about protecting freedom, then we must build a system where: Abuse is not possible. Made difficult. Not unlikely. Yet Impossible.

THE PRINCIPLE THAT CHANGES EVERYTHING

Everything comes back to this, and it bears repeating: "The moment your money exists only by permission, your freedom does too." So the question remains: How do we build a system where money does NOT depend on permission?

RULE #1 — NO MORE MONEY CREATED OUT OF NOTHING, THIN AIR!

This is where the problem begins. When money can be created:

- without labor
- without production
- without real value behind it

Money becomes a tool of control. So the rule must be permanent and unbreakable: No money creation without real, verifiable value behind it. No exceptions. No "emergency powers." No hidden mechanisms. Because every exception becomes the doorway back in.

RULE #2 — LOCK THE SYSTEM INTO THE HIGHEST LAW

If it can be changed quietly, it will be. That is why this cannot live in policy. It cannot live in regulations. It must be protected at the highest level of law, the Constitution, where change requires the will of the people, not the maneuvering of insiders, or the manipulation go Congress. Because what was done once through legislation, therefore, it can be undone again through legislation.

RULE #3 — COMPLETE AND PERMANENT TRANSPARENCY

Secrecy is the breeding ground of corruption. So we eliminate secrecy. At all times, We The People must be able to see: how much money exists, what backs it, were it is held, who controls it, it must be audited once a year, not after a request. Always. Because if the system is honest, it should have nothing to hide.

RULE #4 — NEVER AGAIN A SINGLE POINT OF CONTROL

The danger was never just the system.

It was the concentration of power. So we remove the possibility of central control. No single institution. No single group. No single decision point, should ever control the lifeblood of the entire economy. Instead, power must be distributed. Local. Regional. Independent. So that if one part fails, the whole system does not fall with it.

RULE #5 — THOSE WHO CONTROL MONEY MUST BE ACCOUNTABLE

Here is where the system has failed before.

The people in control carried no real risk. If they failed: they were protected, they were rescued, the public paid the price. That has to end. No bailouts. No protection from failure. No shifting losses to the people. If We The People control money, then we are responsible for the consequences.

That changes everything.

No more robbing Peter to pay Paul. Paul should have had his budget, and should have done his home work, if he didn't shame on Paul. Proper preparation is expect in any form of governance, why not is city, state, and federal? Budgets must be specific, no more fat, no more pork, and no more lying deception.

RULE #6 — THE PEOPLE MUST HAVE PERMANENT OVERSIGHT

Not temporary. Not symbolic. Permanent. The people must have: Independent audit authority. Protected access to information, the power to investigate and expose wrongdoing. And most importantly: That power must never be removable. Because the moment oversight disappears, abuse returns.

RULE #7 — NO MONOPOLY ON MONEY

This may be the most important protection of all. If there is only one system, then whoever controls it controls everything. So we must never again allow a monopoly on money. People must have the right to: Hold real assets. Choose how they store value. Operate outside a single controlled system, because freedom requires options. And options prevent control.

RULE #8 — MAKE REVERSAL IMPOSSIBLE WITHOUT THE PEOPLE

Here is the final safeguard. No system, no matter how well designed, survives if the people forget why it exists. So the ultimate protection is this: We The People must understand it. Deeply, Clearly, Unshakably! So that any attempt to reverse it, becomes impossible without their consent, only by a vote of We The People. Because once the public understands that: the control of money is control of freedom, they will never willingly give it up again.

THE LESSON WE MUST NEVER FORGET

This has already happened once, back in 1837.

A leader, President Andrew Jackson stood against centralized banking and shut it down. And yet, it came back. Why? Because the system was not made perm anent. Because within 70 years, the structure allowed it back into existance.. Because We The People were not prepared to defend it. We The People lost our past, we forgot where we came from causing us to lose our way going forward, because we didn't have our Freedom compass to guide us. Freedom isn't Free! It will cost someone more than they should have to pay, if their not listening!

Here's what another President did to We The People!

The Day the Gold Was Taken

On April 5, 1933, Franklin D. Roosevelt signed Executive Order 6102, requiring Americans to surrender most of their gold coins, bullion, and certificates, to the government by May 1 of that year. The justification? To fight the Great Depression by expanding the money supply. If Gold is money, and you are taking it out of circulation how is that expanding the money supply. If anything its decreasing it. The government will tell us anything they want, to and put a spin on it to sell their idea. They think everyone has their head in the sand. What, most facts show, its the other way around. The government is the Ostrich.

At that time, bank failures had sparked panic. Citizens, acting rationally, began hoarding gold, real money, (can you blame them) because they no longer trusted the system. But that very act reduced the circulating money supply, tightening the economic wise. So the government stepped in, and took the gold.

The "Why" — And the Question It Raises

We're told it was necessary. That hoarding had to be stopped. That the economy had to be stabilized. That drastic times required drastic measures. But let's slow that down for just a second. Because here's what doesn't get said enough:

Citizens understand economic reality better than politicians ever will.

They live it. They feel inflation at the grocery store. They adjust when gas prices spike. They make the hard calls, skip meals, delay medical care, stretch every dollar. Politicians? They read reports. So when the people chose to hold gold, they weren't being reckless, they were protecting themselves. Some might even call this prudent or downright cautious.

A Simple but Dangerous Question

What if it wasn't gold? What if Americans had been holding something else of value, rare comic books baseball cards, anything the market deemed valuable. What if it were electric dollars? Would the government have had the right to take that too? YES, is the uncomfortable answer: under certain conditions. Through the principle of eminent domain, the government can seize private property for public use, so long as it offers "just compensation." That's the law. But law and justice are not always the same thing.

The Moving Target

Gold has a unique problem, for governments. It doesn't sit still. Over time, its value trends upward. It holds purchasing power. It exposes the weakness of paper systems. So when the government took gold in 1933, it wasn't just collecting a static asset. It was taking something whose trajectory was already pointing higher. That's like shooting at a moving target, and then claiming the profit when it keeps rising.

A Principle Worth Stating

This isn't law, at least not yet, but maybe it should be: Everyone is a citizen first. Before you are a mayor, a council member, a county supervisor, a congressman, a senator, or even a president! You are one of We the People. And no system is supposed to serve them! No, its the other way around.

Gold, Power, and History

Gold is often called "God's money"—not as a slogan, but because of its permanence. It has been recognized as money for thousands of years.

- As early as 40,000 BC, natural gold appeared in human use
- By 4,600–4,200 BC, worked gold artifacts emerged in ancient Europe
- By 3,000 BC, civilizations in Egypt and Mesopotamia were using gold for wealth and trade. And throughout history, one pattern repeats: When governments need control, they go after the gold. Kings and monarchs seized it to fund wars. Empires confiscated it to stabilize collapsing systems. The British Crown captured it at sea. And in 1933, the United States government required its own citizens to turn it in. Different times. Different leaders. Same playbook.

FINAL DECLARATION

We are not just fixing a system.

We are building a safeguard for future generations. A line of defense that cannot be crossed again. A structure that cannot and should not be quietly rewritten. A foundation that cannot be corrupted. Because freedom is not protected by hope. It is protected by design, and a willing heart to fight Tyranny at every corner, and never give an inch back, to those power hungry Elitist!

Those Harvard grads, who think they have all the answers! Freedom is not protected by good intentions." It is only protected by systems that cannot be corrupted! And if We The People fail to build that system, then no matter what we fix today, it will be taken again tomorrow! Planning is good, but this requires perfect planning, leaving no stone unturned unturned,

LET'S SAY THAT EVERYTHING FAILS!

So we end up sewing the Government and the Federal Reserve. We lose in ever court room and appeal every decision and now the day of WE THE PEOPLE are headed in the final court of the lands,

THE SUPREME COURT!

CHAPTER 8

MAKE IT IMPOSSIBLE TO STEAL

OF COURSR: Again FromWe The People.

There's a hard truth we can't avoid: The system didn't fail by accident. It was designed in a way that allowed it to be taken over. Not overnight. Not with tanks or soldiers. But slowly, quietly, not legally, but structurally. And once control of the money was taken, everything else followed. Because the rule is simple:

Who controls the money… controls everything.

So if we're serious about fixing this country—really fixing it—then we're not just talking about policy changes or elections. We're talking about something much deeper. We're talking about building a system where stealing from the people is no longer possible. Not harder. Not less likely. Impossible.

THE REAL PROBLEM WAS NEVER JUST "BAD PEOPLE"

It's easy to point fingers. Corrupt politicians. Greedy bankers. Unelected bureaucrats. But here's the reality: Even good people placed inside a broken system will eventually be forced to play by its rules. And the current system has three fatal flaws:

1. Centralized Control of Money

A small group has the power to expand or contract the money supply at will. They don't need permission. They don't need a vote. And they don't face immediate consequences. That's not a free system. That's control.

2. Unlimited Creation of Currency

Money can be created out of nothing. No labor. No production. No real value backing it. And when new money is created, it doesn't enter the system evenly. It enters at the top. Which means those closest to the source benefit first, and everyone else pays the price through inflation. That's not economics. That's legalized theft.

3. Zero Direct Accountability to the People

The people don't vote on monetary policy. They don't approve expansion. They don't reject manipulation. Decisions that affect every dollar in your pocket are made behind closed doors. That's not representation. That's separation.

SO WHAT WOULD IT TAKE TO MAKE THEFT IMPOSSIBLE?

If we're serious, the answer isn't complicated, but it is bold.We need a system built on three unbreakable pillars:

PILLAR 1: MONEY MUST HAVE REAL VALUE

If money can be created freely, it will be abused. Always. The only way to stop that is to tie money to something that cannot be created out of thin air. Something real. Something limited. Something that requires effort to obtain.

Historically, that has been: Gold, Silver, Tangible assets tied to production Why? Because you can't print gold. You can't fake scarcity. You can't manipulate supply without real-world effort.

When money is tied to something real: Government spending becomes limited. Debt becomes accountable. Inflation becomes restrained. In other words: Reality re-enters the system.

PILLAR 2: NO CENTRAL AUTHORITY CAN CONTROL SUPPLY ALONE

Power concentrated is power abused. Every time. So the question becomes: Who controls the money? And the answer must be: Not one group. Not one institution. Not one board.A secure system requires: Decentralized oversight. Transparent rules. Automatic constraints that no one can override. Because if someone can manipulate the system. Eventually, someone will.

PILLAR 3: FULL TRANSPARENCY TO THE PEOPLE

If the system is honest, it should be visible. Every action. Every adjustment. Every decision. No closed doors. No hidden mechanisms.

Imagine a system where: The total money supply is publicly visible at all times Any change requires clear justification Every citizen can see exactly what's happening in real time

That alone would eliminate most abuse. Because corruption thrives in darkness. Transparency destroys it.

BUILDING THE SYSTEM: WHAT IT ACTUALLY LOOKS LIKE

Now let's make this real. Not theory—implementation.

1. A Value-Backed Currency System

Currency must represent something real.

This could include: Precious metals reserves. Energy production. National asset backing. A fixed, rule-based supply model. The key principle: Money must be earned—not created.

2. Rule-Based Expansion (Not Discretionary)

If the money supply ever expands, it must follow strict, predefined rules. Not opinions. Not forecasts. Not "emergency decisions."

Rules.

For example: Expansion tied to measurable economic output.Expansion capped and predictable. No sudden injections benefiting insiders That removes manipulation from the equation.

3. No Backdoor Mechanisms

No emergency powers. No "temporary" programs that become permanent. No loopholes. Because every loophole becomes a weapon later.

4. Direct Accountability to the People

This is where everything changes. Major monetary changes should require: Public awareness,. Clear explanation. Structural limits that cannot be bypassed. You don't need every citizen voting on every detail. But you do need a system where: The people are no longer locked out.

WHAT THIS FIXES IMMEDIATELY

If these pillars are in place, several things happen fast: Inflation Stops Being a Hidden Tax No more silent erosion of savings. If money can't be created freely, it can't be devalued freely. Government Spending Becomes Real No more printing to cover mistakes. Every dollar spent must come from: Taxation. Or real value. That forces discipline. Wealth Stops Flowing Upward by Design. No more advantage for those closest to money creation. No more "first access" benefit. The playing field levels out.

Trust Begins to Return

Because people can finally see: The rules. The limits. The reality And when people trust the system again.Everything changes.

WHAT WILL STOP THIS FROM HAPPENING?

Let's not pretend this would be easy. Because the current system benefits those in power.

And people rarely give up power voluntarily.

There will be resistance:

- Political resistance
- Financial resistance
- Media resistance

You'll hear things like:

- "It's too complicated"
- "It would crash the economy"
- "We need flexibility"

But what they really mean is:

They don't want to lose control.

THE REAL QUESTION

This is what it all comes down to: Do we want a system that can be controlled, Or a system that protects the people? Because you can't have both.

FINAL THOUGHT

If we do nothing… The system continues exactly as it is. Money loses value. Control tightens. Freedom shrinks. But if we build this right—if we commit to it fully. We create something entirely different:

A system where: Money is honest. Power is limited. Theft is not just illegal… but structurally impossible And for the first time in a long time.

The people are no longer at the mercy of the system.

They are protected by it.

CHAPTER 9

THE PEOPLE vs. THE SYSTEM

Heard Before the Highest Court in the Land:

THE SUPREME COURT

OPENING

Let me introduce myself, I'm Andrew Jackson, one of your past presidents. I'm a voice from your past, unfortunately, you failed to listen to me. I'm not the only voice of the past thats been drowned out with the sound of the money machine cracking out your greenbacks.

What about other past presidents, like George Washington or Thomas Jefferson the first Secretary of State (1790–1793), second Vice President (1797–1801), and third President (1801–1809). I will call them to testify on the behalf of We The People as witnesses.

Why haven't you people been paying attention? Why, hasn't anyone noticed what the private baking industry is getting away with. Why hasn't someone told you? " Oh, By the way, you owe us $39 trillion." You pause, you think back, and ask the only question that should matters: "When did I agree to that?" And the answer comes back: "You didn't" —That's the moment this case begins."

OPENING STATEMENTS:

The United States Magistrate Judge stands to his feet, and announce the charges: Ladies an gentlemen, let's be clear about this from the start. We are not saying there is no gold. We are saying something far more important: Prove there is. Because for decades, the American people have been told, over and over again, that gold: Won't work. Can't work. Is outdated. Limits growth. Must be replaced. If it has no real value, why then has it been JAILED at Fort Knox? IF THERE'S NO VALUE, GIVE IT BACK TO WE THE PEOPLE.

Twenty different arguments. Twenty different reasons to trust the system instead. And yet, not one clear answer to a very simple question:

"Where is the gold?"… AND WHY ALL THIS DEBT?

THE COURTROOM

This case is heard before the highest court in the land. The last place where TRUTH is supposed to matter. The final place where We The People can be heard. The government and the Federal Reserve are being charged for crimes against WE THE PEOPLE.

The United States Magistrate Judge stands to his feet and reads these cages by WE THE PEOPLE: charge both our government and the Federal Reserve with the following:

Violation of the Public Debt Clause (14th Amendment) Arguing it impossible to pay without devaluing the currency, violates the clause stating the "validity of the public debt amounting to: $39 TRILLION, shall be questioned."We did not agree to this sort of outcome.

Breach of Fiduciary Duty: Elected officials and Fed policymakers, failed in their fiduciary responsibility to manage the nation's financial health, leading to an unsustainable debt trajectory that threatens the future of the economy.

Violation of the Constitution/10th Amendment: The Federal Reserve system itself is unconstitutional because the Constitution grants Congress the power to "coin money" and "regulate the value thereof," not a quasi-private central bank, arguably violating the 10th Amendment by delegating this power.

Conspiracy to Defraud/Excessive Spending: The Federal Reserve's "lender of last resort" actions (e.g., bailouts) encourage reckless behavior among banks, leading to further systemic risk and debt.

Failure of Accountability and Transparency: The Federal Reserve operates without proper oversight, failing to abide by the same transparency standards as other government agencies, and conducting "illegal actions" beyond its legislative authority.

Moral Hazard and Negligence: The Federal Reserve's "lender of last resort" actions (e.g., bailouts) encourage reckless behavior among banks, leading to further systemic risk and debt.

THE CASE

WE THE PEOPLE Bring these charges against our government and the Federal Reserve: On the bases of: Constitutional violations, breach of fiduciary duty, and economic negligence.

The People of the United States vs.

The Federal Government and the Federal Reserve System

Case: SHOW US THE GOLD!

- Breach of trust
- Lack of transparency
- Imposing debt without direct consent
- Replacing something real…, with something controlled

AS WELL: THE FEDERAL RESERVE (FED) IS RESPONSIBLE FOR CREATING UNREALISTIC DEBT, THAT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO PAY!

THE DEFENSE

Across the room stands the prosecuting attorney. Smooth. Persuasive. Calculated. A voice of control, Speaking in the language of progress. President Richard Nixon. Tricky Dick, is his nickname.

Nixon was a meticulous corporate litigator and commercial attorney in California before becoming a high-profile "white shoe" Wall Street lawyer in New York. Admitted to the bar in 1937, he practiced in Whittier, CA, handling oil contracts, wills, and litigation before becoming a partner at Mudge, Rose, Guthrie & Alexand.

He was chosen because he ended GOLD for good, so he thought.

THE PROSECUTION

At the defense table stands a man history remembers well for one reason: He did not trust centralized control over money. Andrew Jackson, Not as President now, but as counsel for We The People. Firm. Direct. Unapologetic. A man who once faced down a central banking system, and would do it again.

Andrew Jackson, a man of no fear, killed Charles Dickinson in a 1806 duel to defend his reputation and his wife Rachel's honor. Jackson is credited with shaping American democracy and expanding suffrage, but his methods and policies were often controversial. Also, the Expansion of Suffrage: Nullification Crisis: "Jackson's handling of the nullification crises of 1832-33, and Calhouns attempt to supersede State authority over Federal authority."

THE PEOPLE SPEAK

Jackson rises slowly. No notes. No hesitation. “Your Honors, We are not here to say WE THE PEOPLE have been treated poorly, but more accurately, shamefully, but certainly irresponsibly. Yes, there is the question is there even any gold.” A breathless hush came over the court room audience, you could’ve heard a pin drop.

A pause. “We are here to ask something simple: “Prove there is GOLD.” There hasn't been a plausible audit done in years. Even, the attempt, (or should I say) the threatened me-gar attempt made by current President Trump, and his then famous sidekick, Elon Musk to audit Fort Knox. Nothing has ever come of that excursion, it never happened, so nothing has been accomplished. All that exist, is the audit this document done some 50 years go. But even more importantly, how did this national debt get out of hand ro the amount of $39 TRILLION without the approval of We the People!

Let the record show:

The last comprehensive, documented audit of the Fort Knox GOLD reserves was conducted from 1974 to 1986, which verified 97% of the gold, with the last major congressional inspection occurring in September 1974. While annual audits involving checks on vault seals continue, a full, independent physical audit has not taken place since the mid-1970. That’s one 56 years! Let the record show the national Debt to be $39, Trillion, in round numbers, who’s could ever count this high?

THE DEFENSE RESPONDS

Past President Nixon, The defense attorney stands to his feet, and mutters, "Gold, er a GOLD, is no longer necessary." I did away with the Gold standard. "We now have something far better." I created legislation to take our nation off the Gold standard back on: August 15, 1971. My move broke the Bretton Woods system of fixed exchange rates, creating a floating fiat money system where the dollar was no longer backed by a physical commodity.

PROSECUTION RESPONSE

Jackson immediately stands to his feet, OBJECTION your honors objection! NO legislation was ever created to take the Gold standard off back of We The People, in: August 15, 1971, President Nixon unilaterally ended the direct convertibility of the U. S. dollar to gold, this was only a presidential act.

Jackson, grins, You have to keep an eye open and an ear pealed for anyone sponsoring FIAT money, or representing the Federal Reserve. When ever money is involved… you can't trust anybody. Please Explain to the court this New System!

THE NEW SYSTEM

Nixon speaks: "The federal Reserve has created a new system where money is no longer physical, it's No longer limited, it's No longer tied to metal, this system is a Digital Currency; Money created instantly, Distributed immediately, Controlled precisely, these No shortages, and no delays, It's Fully manageable, and necessary.

A voice from the room:

"Managed, managed by who?" No answer.

Silence, then another voice from the room:

"Necessary, necessary for who?" No answer.

JACKSON RESPONDS

Jackson steps forward. Measured. Grounded. "I have heard all this before." "Different words, same promise." A pause. Power centralized, under the claim of efficiency. "You have not improved money, You've simply removed it from the hands of We The People."

Jackson looks directly at the Court. "You call it digital currency."

"WE THE PEOPLE: call it something else." DEC, "Disappearing Electronic Currency."

All you've done is created a new brand of FIAT money digitally, It's "Money you cannot hold, " "Money you cannot verify," "Money that can be altered, it's "Restricted," "Or erased," "And you ask We The People to trust this?" You know that Fiat money is a government-issued currency that is not backed by physical commodities like gold or silver.

Gold is God's money!

Jackson walks to the gold bar. Places his hand on it. "This Gold bar requires no explanation." "This Gold bar requires no permission." "This Gold bar represents labor, it must be earned, and it can be held. It must be dug out of the Earth, its labored for. Here's the truth, "A man works, He is paid, and what he earns must remain his."

Jackson glances toward the prosecution. “You propose a system where money can disappear.” Do yo want We The People, to guess what walnut shell the their money is hiding under? A slight pause. “In my time, we called that theft.” THE BIGGER TRUTH IS: “You are not replacing gold with something stronger, you are replacing it with something controllable, and when money is controllable” “So are the people.” The FED, wants control of We The People!

Jackson takes a SILVER coin from his pocket, looks at it closely, then flips it in the air, and let’s it hit the floor to let everyone in the court room to hear the affect of it’s resounding astounding ring. Do you hear that?

Then he goes over to one of the Judges, and hands this coin to him, placing it hard in the middle of his palm,. Feel the weight, see the glitter, your holding something indestructible, thats been use for bartering, and for money for thousands of years. And you want to tell We The People, your replacing it either something invisible? Something that can vanish into this air, and never be seen again? Your talking about something electric, right?

Before coming here I google: How much money has been stolen electronically from institutions. Here’s googles response:

Billions of dollars are stolen electronically from institutions annually, with 2024 estimates showing over $12 billion lost from food assistance (SNAP) programs and Americans losing $16.6 billion to online scams. California alone saw $20 billion in unemployment fraud and over $400 million in EBT benefits stolen since 2001. What make the federal Reserve fail safe?

LET THE $39 TRILLION DEBT BE ENTERED INTO THE RECORD

The clerk reads: “National debt: approximately $39 trillion. “Annual interest: over $1 trillion.” “Interest exceeds national defense spending.” Over one trillion a year!

JACKSON’S RESPONSE

Jackson turns slowly. “And this,“This is the result.” “Who owes this debt really?” Answer: Not We the People. Jackson raises his voice slightly “Did the People agree to it? Silence.

Where’s the contract? “No contract.” “No signature.” “No consent.” We The People, Charge the U.S. government as well as the Federal Reserve to produce the contract: If no contract can be produced, then the contract must be deemed unenforceable or the claim failing due to lack of evidence.

“Remove discipline…” “Remove limits…” “Remove accountability…”

“And debt takes its place.” “THIS DIDN’T HAPPEN BY ACCIDENT, it happened by design.” This happened on PURPOSE!

JACKON SHOUTS… “WE THE PEOPLE, HAVE A RIGHT TO DEMAND THIS, OUR FREEDOM IS AT STAKE.’

A citizen stands.“We The People are simply asking that our gold be placed in our hands, for the work we have done, not hidden away where there is no real accountability.”

The judges leave the room to take a vote. The deliberations only takes a few minutes, the Supreme Court Judges, return to the court room: . The Supreme Court Decided:

THE VERDICT:

The United States Magistrate Judge stands to his feet and reads their decision, from the cages by: WE THE PEOPLE:

While the Court acknowledged the government was acting strongly, it ruled that gold holders suffered no actual monetary loss because they were given paper currency of equal value to the gold they surrendered.

HOWEVER, Americans regained the right to own gold on December 31, 1974. This change occurred after President Gerald Ford signed Public Law 93-373 in August of that year, ending a 41-year ban on private ownership that had been in place since the Great Depression.

THEREFORE, THE RULING

The Court stands. The debt in question…" "Was not directly contracted by the People, "Was not knowingly consented to," "Therefore, the People are not responsible for it."

THE SENTENCE

"Those who created this system…""Expanded this debt…""And benefited from it…"Shall bear the burden of resolving it."

FINAL GAVEL

"You built it…You fix it."

CLOSING

Jackson turns toward the courtroom. “Power over money, is power over men.” A pause. “And the moment that power leaves the hands of the People, FREEDOM follows.” “The line is drawn. Stand, or step aside.”

FINAL WORD

This case was never really about gold. It was about abuse and control. Control over money, control over value. Abuse for allowing $39 Trillion dollars to be accumulated in debt, knowing the wasn’t enough money in the entire world to pay for this debt, even of money were printed for decades But this was done mostly for control over We The People. Because when money can be created, adjusted, or erased, so can the limits on power. And that is why this trial had to happen, even if only in these pages of make believe. Because, somewhere between the gold and paper, we were told to forget, and the debt we were told to accept, something was taken. And the moment We The People begin asking for it back, everything changes.

HERE’ IS A QUESTION AMERICANS SHOULD BE ASKING!

Stop and think! There are millions of American who given their lives for our FREEDOM. Did they die in vain? We have millions of people flocking to our borders. The real reason they want intense is because of our Bill of Rights, and our Constitution, and they don’t even know it.

They are coming here of the free handouts, and not for Freedoms call. You would need to be a true American to know and understand the difference. Yes, this has been an imaginary courtroom drama. But the facts are not imaginary, they are real. They are measurable, and they are sitting right in front of you. The only question that remains is this: What are you willing to do about them?

The further this nation drift away from TRUTH the more it will HATE those who present it. Stop listen to stories on the internet, and start searching for truth, because only the FACTS will save us. Those who tell lies, becomes one. Those who listen to lies, and believe them, are doomed to give away their FREEDOM! FREEDOM 1st, everything else second!

Chapter 10

OUR CITIZEN ACTION PLAYBOOK

If your a citizen and want to change the USA for good, give it you best shot. Here's the real court rooms make scene, it takes place in your City hall or county building. It happens in front of your Mayor and your board of supervisors.

I asked Google to define Freedom, and apparently A I believes it will eventually change it's meaning:

Googles answer: In a sense, yes. The rapid integration of AI is actively reshaping the philosophical and practical meaning of "freedom," shifting it from a traditional ideal of self-determination towards a state some experts to call "algorithmic dependence.

While AI doesn't literally "rewrite" the dictionary, its influence is hollowing out established concepts of liberty in several core ways: From "Choosing Means" to "Enslaved Masters" Philosophers argue that we are becoming "enslaved master.s" We still choose our goals (e.g., "Take me to this restaurant" or "Write this email"), but we are losing the means to achieve them without AI aid.

WE THE PEOPLE:

Must Apply Pressure Where It Actually Works!

This is not theory. This is not a protest for the sake of emotion. This is a step-by-step blueprint for ordinary citizens to create real, measurable pressure inside the system, where decisions are made and records are kept. If enough people follow this, outcomes will change.

STEP 1: FIND THE ROOM

Every city has one. It may be called:

- City Council
- Board of Supervisors
- Town Council

Meetings are:

- Public
- Scheduled
- Posted online

Action: Wear a t-shirt, don't carry a sign. Signs say I'm angry,. A t-shirt says, I'M STAYING, and I'LL BE BACK!

Also, Search: For like mined people to join you, buy them a T-shirt.
"[Your City] City Council Meeting Schedule" Go to your board of supervisor meetings.

Write it down, know where committee meetings are being held, show up waring your T-shirt. Put meetings on your calendar. Because change begins with you showing up. Lean your city council members names! Lean who your county supervisors are

STEP 2: GET THERE EARLY

This matters more than people think. Most meetings require you to:

- Fill out a speaker card

- Register your name
- Select the topic (or "public comment")

If you show up late—you may not speak.

If you show up early—you are on record.

STEP 3: CLAIM YOUR THREE MINUTES

You will typically be given about three minutes to speak. NEVER APPEAR ANGRY! That is your window. Do not ramble. Never vent. Make sure you deliver a clear, focused message. Practice before you get their. Visualize speaking to a crowed. Breath study, Breath constantly, speak with authors, but never get mad, the minute you do this, things shut down, meaning people will not hear, you because nobody wants to listen to an angry message!

Use this structure:

1. State the issue clearly
"Today I'm here to address…"

2. State why it matters
"This affects our community because…"

3. State what you want done
"I am asking this council to…" VOTE, To CHANGE THIS, always consider!

Clarity beats emotion.
Precision beats volume.

STEP 4: SPEAK INTO THE RECORD

This is critical. Always begin with: For the RECORD, I'm bring this before the city council or the board of supervisors.

When you speak in that room:

- It is recorded
- It becomes part of official record
- It cannot be erased or ignored long-term

This is not social media. This is documentation inside the system. And documentation creates pressure.

STEP 5: DON'T GO ALONE

One voice starts something. Multiple voices build momentum.

Bring:

- Friends
- Neighbors
- Business owners
- Concerned citizens

Even if only 3–5 people speak on the same issue, that changes the room.

STEP 6: REPEAT—CONSISTENCY CREATES POWER

This is where most people fail. They show up once, and disappear. That does not create change.

Real pressure looks like:

- Week after week
- Meeting after meeting
- Same message, clearly delivered

Consistency turns a complaint into a pattern. And patterns demand attention.

STEP 7: EXPAND TO OTHER CITIES

Now the strategy grows. If the same issue is raised in:

- Multiple cities
- Multiple councils
- Multiple communities

It becomes bigger than local.

Now it is:

- A regional issue
- A state concern
- A national signal

This is how small voices become large pressure.

STEP 8: FORCE FORMAL RESPONSE

Once pressure builds, ask for action:

- "Will this council issue a statement?"
- "Will this be referred for investigation?"
- "Will you take a formal position?"

This moves the issue from: Conversation → Action And once action is requested publicly… Silence becomes visible.

STEP 9: DOCUMENT EVERYTHING

This is your leverage. Record your own speech

- Save meeting minutes
- Track dates and responses

Enough leverage can move anything! Why?

Because patterns + documentation = evidence And evidence is what:

- Media follows

- Investigators review
- Officials cannot ignore

STEP 10: STAY CONTROLLED, STAY CREDIBLE

This is not about anger. It's about effectiveness.

- Be respectful
- Be firm
- Be clear

The goal is not to be dismissed.
The goal is to be taken seriously.

Credibility is power. Protect it at any cost, without it, who's going to listen. Without it, you could be viewed as a potential liar.

WHAT THIS CREATES

If done correctly, this playbook produces:

- Public record
- Repeated messaging
- Cross-city patterns
- Increased visibility
- Rising pressure

And eventually, a shift. Because at some point: Ignoring the issue becomes harder than addressing it.

WHAT THIS IS NOT

Let's be clear: This is not: Instant, Easy, or Guaranteed. But it is: Real, Proven, available to every citizen, and most importantly, it is underused.

FINAL CALL TO ACTION

This nation needs to educate itself with the facts about how our liberty and FREEDOM which were hijacked back in 1913 by: the FEDERAL RESERVE, in cahoots with the Federal governmnet!

For over a 100 years we've allowed the Federal Reserve to manipulate us, causing division, and creating a system of money and control. And look where they've brought us, a $39 trillion in national debt, where now our government pays over $1 trillion a year in interest payment. Interest now exceeding what we spend to defend this nation. That is not theory. Where and when does this END?

This story is not an opinion. This story is a reality. It's up to each America to dig out the facts. So now each of us faces a choice. Do we ignore this? Do we accept it? Do we allow those responsible to walk away?

While the FED intend to build an even more powerful system of control?

Make no mistake, if this is not answered, if this is not challenged, then what comes next will not be better. It will be tighter, with more control, and far less freedom. So the question becomes personal. Will 'We The People, allow this to continue? It's time we finally draw the line in the sand?

That decision does not belong to politicians. It does not belong to institutions. It belongs to you and me. To each individual. To every American who still believes in freedom, accountability, and TRUTH. And let me be clear: Standing for freedom is not comfortable. It is not easy. And it is not convenient. But it is necessary.

So if you are willing to stand… Then stand. If you are willing to speak, Then speak. If you are willing to demand accountability… Then now is the time.

And if you are not, Then step aside. Because there are still Americans who will.

This is not about politics.

This is not about parties. This is about a system that has operated for over a century, without answering to the very people it affects. And that ends, When We The People say it ends.

The line is drawn. The question left: Which side of the line are you on?

You don't need permission to begin.

You don't need a crowd. You don't need a platform. You need: A meeting. A moment. And the willingness to stand up and speak. Because the system may feel distant, But there are still doors open. And those doors lead to rooms where decisions are made. Someone once told me, when I was replacing him as at a directorship of a Rescue Mission, Jerry, All it takes is a WILLING HEART!

TRUTH ON PURPOSE

This is where it stops being history

It start by being personal. Because when a government can reach into your hands, your bank account, of its own people and take what they earned, what they saved, what they trusted, then have the nerve to tell them it was for their own good! That's not just policy… that's power, and power, unchecked, does not retreat… it expands. The truth is, this didn't happen to strangers. It happened to Americans, people who worked, sacrificed, and believed they had a say. People who thought what was theirs, was theirs, until it wasn't.

TRUTH ON PURPOSE means, we don't look away from that. We don't soften it. We don't excuse it. We face it, head on. Because a people who don't confront the truth will eventually live under the weight of a lie. And if We The People won't stand up and say, "No more. Not again." then history won't just remember what happened in 1933, it will repeat it. History doesn't ask permission to repeat itself, it just waits for silence.

CLOSING: MY FINAL THOUGHT

If WE THE PEOPLE, want accountability, we must stop shouting from the outside, or from the sidelines, and start speaking from the inside.

LET"S MAKE AMERICA, AMERICA AGAIN!

PRESIDENT TRUMP, HERE'S YOUR PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS!

"HOW WE MAKE IT IMPOSSIBLE TO STEAL FROM: WE THE PEOPLE AGAIN"

My fellow Americans, Tonight, I speak to you about something more important than politics. More important than parties. More important than any single election. I speak to you about freedom itself. Because there is a truth we can no longer ignore:

The moment your money exists only by permission, your freedom does too.

For too long now, we have lived under a system where the value of your work, your savings, your future, can be reduced, controlled, or taken, without your consent. Not by accident. But by design. And tonight, we say: No more. We are not here to debate the past. We are here to secure the future. A future where:

- Money cannot be created out of nothing
- Value cannot be manipulated behind closed doors
- And no institution holds unchecked power over the lives of the American people.

Because freedom must never depend on permission. So here is what we will do. We will build a system that cannot be corrupted. We will ensure that:

- Every dollar represents real value
- Every system is fully transparent
- Every decision is accountable to We The People

No more secrecy. No more manipulation. No more shifting the burden onto the American worker. We will end the concentration of power.

Never again will one system, one group, or one institution control the lifeblood of this nation. Power will return where it belongs: To the people. And let me be clear, This is not about politics. This is about principle. Because when money is controlled, people are controlled. And when people are controlled, freedom is lost.

So tonight, we draw a line. Not in anger. But in clarity. Not in division. But in truth. We will not pass this problem onto the next generation. We will solve it now. We will secure it now. And we will make it impossible, for it to ever happen again, now!

May God bless you.

And God bless the United States of America.
